It is compatible with Windows XP/7/8/10 (32-bit and 64-bit). In addition to the newly introduced Melodyne 4, Celemony announced today the release of Melodyne Studio. This software is targeted at providing musicians with an innovative way to improve their performances in real-time, but also allow artists and producers to do amazing things when it comes to tweaking their production workflow. The software is born out of a desire for Celemony to help improve the quality of music across the globe. "Music technology is in its own category in many ways," says Patrick Chardromet, CEO and founder of Celemony. "We started Melodyne Software in 1999 with just one product. Today we have a range of products whose purpose is to improve music and make it sound better. But our mission, the reason why we work - is because we love music." Melodyne Studio Edition V3 includes a range of new features, which will be expanded upon in future iterations. However, there are two major additions that will significantly impact the experience when using Melodyne. The first is the introduction of Melodyne's famous DNA Direct Note Access technology into Melodyne Studio. This feature allows users to instantly transform chords into individual notes that can then be modified in an unrivalled manner. The second major addition to Melodyne Studio Edition V3 is the introduction of the intelligence engine called Auto-Tune Evo. While Melodyne has always been the first choice when it comes to making subtle adjustments to notes, Auto-Tune Evo is about one thing - providing perfect intonation. Melodyne Studio Edition V3 has been designed for both Mac OS X 10.7 and later, as well as Windows 8.1 and later. It is able to work seamlessly with all DAWs supporting Audio Units, VST or AAX plug-ins, including Logic Pro X, Cubase, Pro Tools 11/12/2018, Nuendo 6/7/8/9 and Ableton Live 9.
